

Contributors

John Field, 10 Bayley Close, Uppingham, Oakham, Rutland LE15 9TG, UK, formerly a senior lecturer in English, is Editorial Assistant in the English Place-Name Society and a member of the Council for Name Studies in Great Britain and Ireland. He has written extensively on placenames, especially field names. His English Field-Names: A Dictionary (1972) was reprinted in paperback this year.

Robert F. Fleissner, Department of English, Theatre, and Communication, Central State University, Wilberforce, OH 45384, has written extensively on the connections between the Victorian and Renaissance periods, from his first book, Dickens and Shakespeare (1965), to his most recent, Prufrock (1988), which deals much with both Victorian and Shakespearean influences on Eliot. A forthcoming book, A Rose by Another Name, will be out in September.

Erik Gunnemark, Valåsgatan 42 C, S-41659 Gothenburg, Sweden, is the author, with Donald Kenrick, of A Geolinguistic Handbook. Comfortable in at least a dozen languages, he has worked as translation manager for Saab-Scania and has had his own translation agency. His more recent interests include geolinguistics, and he is the "president and secretary" of Amici Linguarum, an international geolinguistics society.

Edwin D. Lawson, Psychology, State University College, Fredonia, NY 14063, a member of the Board of Editors of Names, has recently retired from teaching. His current projects include updating his 1987 Personal Names and Naming: An Annotated Bibliography and a study of the psychology of first names.

Breandan S. Mac Aodha, Professor of Geography, University College, Galway, Ireland, has written numerous articles on placenames. His main research interest lies in the toponymy of Ireland, but he also has a strong interest in the names of Spain and Portugal, in both of which he has spent long periods.

W.F.H. Nicolaisen, Department of English, General Literature, and Rhetoric, State University of New York, Binghamton, NY 13901, is a former president of the American Name Society (1977) and a member of the Executive Committee of the International Committee of Onomastic Sciences. In addition to his extensive research and numerous publications in onomastics, especially in the theory of names, he is also active in folklore research.

Roy J. Percy, English, University of Oklahoma, Norman, OK 73019, teaches medieval English literature and has published over thirty articles on Chaucer, Dunbar, the Old French fabliaux, and related topics. He was the founder and first editor (1978-1982) of Studies in the Age of Chaucer (the Yearbook of the New Chaucer Society).

112 Names, Vol. 37, no. 1 (March 1989)

Lena Peterson, Department of Linguistics and Name Study, University of Uppsala, S-75120 Uppsala, Sweden, is Docent of Scandinavian Languages. She is co-editor (with Professor Thorsten Andersson) of Studia anthroponymica Scandinavica: Tidschrift for nordisk personnamnsforskning, volume 7 of which will come out this year.

Robert M. Rennick, 312 Riverside Drive, Prestonsburg, KY 41653, is the author of Kentucky Place Names (1984) and of many articles on all aspects of naming. He is in charge of local arrangements for the meeting of the American Name Society in Lexington, KY, in November.

Adrian Room, 173 The Causeway, Petersfield, Hants, GU31 4LN, UK, has written over twenty books, mostly on the origins of words and names. His most recent are Dictionary of Place-Names in the British Isles (1988) and Dictionary of World Place-Names Derived from British Names (1989).

Russell Tabbert, English, University of Alaska, Fairbanks, AK 99775, teaches English linguistics, writing, and editing. His primary research interest is American dialects: he is currently compiling a dictionary of Alaskan English on historical principles.

Mark Thomas is a doctoral student in the Department of English at the University of Illinois, Urbana, IL 61801, where he teaches literature, business writing, and creative writing. His M.A. thesis on the poetry of Malcolm Lowry produced several articles and notes on Lowry's poetry and fiction. This article on "Lamia" is his first publication on a nineteenth century topic.

Irina Vasiliev teaches in the Department of Geography at Syracuse University, Syracuse, NY 13244-1160. Her main research interest is in the mapping of temporal information, including methods of mapping names.