

Contributors to Volume 44, Number 2

Kerrigan Black was a West Coast jazz musician, composer and teacher. He was especially interested in the history and development of African-American music and he spent much of his time introducing this music to schoolchildren. Mr. Black was the writer and performer of Tryin' to Get Home: A Video History of African American Song. His special interest in names developed from a general interest in folklore. He died in 1993.

Henri Diament is in the Department of French at the University of Haifa, Haifa 31905, Israel. His interests are in French toponymy and anthroponymy, although he has forayed into American onomastics as well. Diament's current interests are in the translations of names along the English-French axis. He has published widely in French, American, Canadian, South African and Israeli journals. Diament lectures and writes in both English and French; although French-born, he is American trained. cha00cd@technion.technion.ac.il

Cleveland Kent Evans teaches Psychology at Bellevue University, Bellevue, Nebraska 68005. The author of Unusual and Most Popular Baby Names and The Ultimate Baby Name Book, he is now following American naming practices using birth data collected from health departments in 13 different states. cevans@scholars.bellevue.edu

Edwin D. Lawson, Professor Emeritus of Psychology at the State University of New York, Fredonia 14063, is President of the American Name Society. The author of Personal Names and Naming and More Names and Naming, Lawson has published widely in the areas of naming patterns, names in society and the psychology of names and name choices.