

Contributors to Volume 47, Number 1:

Christine De Vinne teaches English at Ursuline College in Cleveland, Ohio 44124. Her research interests and primary publications lie at the intersection of American literature and life-writing, particularly confessional narrative. Her research which resulted in the current essay on the Donner party was supported by a grant from The Ohio State University for archival study at the Huntington Library. email: cdevinne@ursuline.edu.

Michael H. Kelly is in the Department of Psychology, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia 19104-6196. He conducts research in a number of areas, which include the psychology of language, language acquisition, reading, metaphorical language, historical linguistics, and lexical innovations such as word blends. His research papers have appeared in such journals as Cognition, Cognitive Psychology, Journal of Experimental Psychology, Linguistics and Psychological Review. email: kelly@psych.upenn.edu.

Ellen Dionne Wu, 1025 Granville Avenue #19, Los Angeles, CA 90049, holds a Master's Degree in Asian American Studies from UCLA. Her research interests include Asian American history and onomastics. She is a staff member of the Chinese Historical Society of Southern California and a visiting lecturer at UCLA. email: ellendionnewu@hotmail.com