Contributors to Volume 47, Number 2:

Alvydas Butkus is head of the Lettonic Center at Vytautas Magnus University, K. Donelaicio 52, 3000 Kaunas, Lithuania. His professional interests, in addition to nicknames, are in Lithuanian onomastics, speech and culture. His book on Lithuanian nicknames was published in 1995. email: alvydas_butkus@fc.vdu.lt

Sheena F. Gardner lectures in Applied English Linguistics at the University of Warwick, Coventry CV4 7AL, England. Much of her previous onomastic research has been on Sudanese Arabic personal names. s.f.gardner@warwick.ac.uk

Robert K. Herbert is Professor of Anthropology and Linguistics at Binghamton University (SUNY), Binghamton, NY 13902-6000. He has published widely in sociolinguistics, African language studies and educational linguistics. In addition to ongoing research into the changing anthroponymy of southern Africa, his current projects include constructions of identity among refugee and immigrant children in Binghamton. email: warthog@binghamton.edu

Ingrid Piller teaches English linguistics at the University of Hamburg, Germany. She is the author of American Automobile Names, published in 1996 and reviewed in Names (June, 1997). Besides her research on trade names and consumer discourse, she is interested in multilingualism and gender. Her current research is on the linguistic practices of bilingual couples. Her mailing address is: Seminar fuer Englische Sprache und Kultur, Universitaet Hamburg, Von-Melle-Park 6, 20146 Hamburg, Germany. email: piller@uni-hamburg.de

Terry Potter has been interested in Arabic since 1984, when he studied in Tunis, Tunisia; he maintains an active interest in the varieties of Arabic spoken in North Africa. He has been teaching linguistics and Arabic since 1995. He is currently teaching in the department of Foreign Languages at the U S Military Academy, West Point, NY 10996. email: gt1704@usma.edu