

Contributors to Volume 48, Number 1

Patrick Hanks is a lexicographer and former chief editor of current English dictionaries at Oxford University Press. He is editor of the New Oxford Dictionary of English (1998), the forthcoming New Oxford Thesaurus of English, and A Dictionary of American Family Names. He is co-author of A Dictionary of Surnames, A Dictionary of First Names, and Babies' Names. phanks@brookbarn.freeseerve.co.uk

Michael Kelly conducts research in the psychology of language, including language acquisition, reading, historical linguistics, and lexical innovations. His work has appeared in Cognition, Cognitive Psychology, Linguistics, Psychological Review, and The Journal of Experimental Psychology. Department of Psychology, University of Pennsylvania, 3815 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, PA 19104. kelly@psych.upenn.edu

Christian Moraru is in the English Department, University of North Carolina, Greensboro, NC 27402, where he teaches and researches modern and postmodern American literature and critical theory. He is associate editor of Symploke, a journal of theory and comparative studies. His new book, Rewriting, Postmodern Narrative and Cultural Critique in the Age of Cloning, is forthcoming from SUNY press. c_moraru@uncg.edu

Uma Shrestha, English Department, Western Oregon University, Monmouth, OR 97361, has also taught at Padma Kanya College in Katmandu, Nepal and at Ball State University. Her research interests are in language and gender studies, in particular the complex pronominal usage of couples in the Newar communities in Katmandu. Her interest in names began when she first noticed that some Newar families had begun seeking names which would distinguish them from other groups. shrestu@wou.edu

D. Kenneth Tucker is an aeronautical and electrical engineer, emphasizing operational research and information engineering. He is the author-builder of the Nagen name register that allows the insertion of any US forename or surname into any system which incorporates names, such as lists of customers or employees. His onomastic interests are in the relationships between forenames and surnames and the statistical predictability of ethnic, cultural, and language sources of either or both. Esson & Tucker Management, Inc. 1270 Royal Palm Crescent, Ottawa, K4M 1J5, Canada. posthaus@igs.net