

Contributors to Volume 53, Number 3

Ahmad Atawneh, Associate Professor, English Department-Hebron University; Hebron /West Bank/ Palestine; research interest is in the field of sociolinguistics, Pragmatics and linguistics; published in pragmatics, code-mixing, aspect, writing, vocabulary borrowing, CALL, discourse analysis.

Maria Palacas is the Director of the McNair Scholars Program at the University of Delaware (047 Memorial Hall, Newark, Delaware 19716). Her research interests include literary linguistics, stylistics, the intersection of sociolinguistics and literature, and literary theory.

Ben P. Robertson is Assistant Professor of English at Troy University in Troy, Alabama, where he teaches composition, world literature, and eighteenth-/nineteenth-century British literature. His primary research interests include women's fiction of the British Romantic period, Romantic poetry and drama, and trans-Atlantic literature. New to the field of onomastics, he plans future studies of names and naming practices. Current book projects include The Pocketbook Diaries of Elizabeth Inchbald, Conflict in Southern Writing, and a study of the Romantic moral romance in the works of Elizabeth Inchbald and Nathaniel Hawthorne.