

Contributors to Volume 53, Number 4

Michael Adams currently teaches at North Carolina State University. He took his Ph.D. in English Language and Literature from the University of Michigan; while a graduate student, he was an assistant on the Middle English Dictionary. He is the author of Slayer Slang: A Buffy the Vampire Slayer Lexicon (OUP, 2003), which contains considerable onomastic material. With Anne Curzan, he has recently written How English Works: A Linguistic Introduction (AB Longman, 2006). He has also written many articles on the history of English, especially slang and jargon, and lexicography. Linguistic issues surrounding trademarks are among his current interests. Previously editor of Dictionaries, he is currently editor of American Speech.

Jennifer Westerhaus Adams earned both an M.A. in English and a J.D. at Duke University. She currently practices at Walker and Lambe, PLLC, in Durham, North Carolina, and the law of intellectual property, including trademark law, is among her specialities. With Ronald R. Butters, she contributed "Linguistic Change in Words One Owns: How Trademarks Become 'Generic'" to Studies in the History of the English Language II: Unfolding Conversations, edited by Anne Curzan and Kimberly Emmons (New York: Mouton de Gruyter, 2004).

Paul D. Numrich is chair of the Program in World Religions and Inter-Religious Dialogue at the Theological Consortium of Greater Columbus, Ohio, and Visiting Research Associate Professor in the Department of Sociology at Loyola University Chicago. His publications include Old Wisdom in the New World: Americanization in Two Immigrant Theravada Buddhist Temples (University of Tennessee Press, 1996).

Fred Kniss is Associate Professor of Sociology at Loyola University Chicago. He is the author of Disquiet in the Land (Rutgers University Press, 1997) and various articles on religious conflict and change. Kniss and Numrich are co-authors of the forthcoming book, Sacred Assemblies and Civil Society: How Religion Matters for America's Newest Immigrants

(Rutgers University Press).

Robert M. Rennick is a retired college/university professor and consultant to the Kentucky state government. He is the author of 13 books on Onomastics (with three more in press) and has published 180+ articles and reviews on onomastics, local and Kentucky history, historical geography, and folklore. He has had numerous articles featured in this journal. He can be reached at 586 Riverside Drive, Prestonsburg, Kentucky 41653-7744.