

Contributors to Volume 54, Number 1

Cynthia L. Hallen is Associate Professor of Linguistics and English Language at Brigham Young University. She has a BA in English and an MA in TESOL from BYU, as well as a PhD in Rhetoric, Composition, and the Teaching of English from the University of Arizona. Her major research focus is the compilation of the Emily Dickinson Lexicon, a dictionary of all the words in Dickinson's poems. Other interests include onomastics, philology, and translation.

Malina Nielson graduated from Brigham Young University in April of 2005 with a BA in English Language and Linguistics. She is currently working as an editor. Her scholarly interests include onomastics, historical linguistics, and bookbinding. She plans to pursue an MA in anthropological linguistics.

Barbara Hendry is an Associate Professor of Anthropology at Georgia Southern University (Dept. of Sociology and Anthropology, GSU, P. O. Box 8051, Statesboro, GA 30460). She is interested in processes of ethnic identity construction and negotiation, and in how language (including names) and other cultural features are used in these processes. She has published on these topics in Language Problems and Language Planning and in the European Studies Journal.

D Kenneth Tucker is English and Canadian with four American (US) grandchildren. He is a Research Fellow at Carleton University in Ottawa. His onomastic interests are centered on the distribution of surnames and forenames in the English-speaking world and the ability to replicate them without error. He has published in Onoma, Canadiana Onomastica, and Nomina, in addition to NAMES. He is an Art & Craft collector with interests in domestic architecture, decoration, and fashion. The Victoria and Albert is his favorite museum.