Judith P. Saunders is Professor of English at Marist College in New York State. Her published commentary addresses a wide range of literary figures and topics, chiefly nineteenth and twentieth century, with an emphasis on contemporary poets (e.g., Gwendolyn Brooks, Elizabeth Bishop, Howard Moss, Reg Saner). She is the author of THE POETRY OF CHARLES TOMLINSON: BORDERLINES (Fairleigh Dickinson University Press, 2003).

Eika Tai is Associate Professor of Japanese at North Carolina State University (Campus Box 8106, Raleigh, NC 27695). She has written on colonial education in Taiwan, Taiwanese and Koreans in Japan, and multiculturalism. She is particularly interested in the act of passing as Japanese by the use of Japanese personal names frequently observed among Asian foreign residents in Japan. Her recent publication includes "'Korean Japanese': A New Identity Option for Resident Koreans in Japan" (Critical Asian Studies) and "Korean Activism and Ethnicity in the Changing Ethnic Landscape of Urban Japan" (Asian Studies Review).

Emma Woo Louie is an independent researcher focusing on Chinese American names from the point of view of an American of Chinese ancestry. She is the author of Chinese American Names: Tradition and Transition, published in 1998 by McFarland & Co. She was born in Seattle, Washington, and grew up in San Francisco's Chinatown where there were many opportunities to observe naming customs of Chinese Americans as well as to note the similarities in thought and naming habits of peoples of different ethnic background.
