

Contributors to Volume 54, Number 4

Peter K W Tan, Department of English Language and Literature, National University of Singapore, 7 Arts Link, SINGAPORE 117570, Republic of Singapore. He has worked on personal names in Singapore and has published papers on this subject in the journals World Englishes and English Today. He is also interested in issues surrounding the development of the English language in South-east Asia, including the rise of computer-mediated communication in this part of the world.

Ronald J. Leach is a Professor in the Department of Systems and Computer Science at Howard University, where he has taught since 1969. He received three degrees in Mathematics from the University of Maryland at College Park and an M. S. in Computer Science from Johns Hopkins. After nine years as Department Chair, he is pursuing a well-earned sabbatical to study, among other things, non-traditional applications of computer science and mathematics to non-traditional areas, especially in the area of name matching within historical documents. He especially enjoys combining his hobbies of genealogy and history with his computer science and mathematics technical training in this avenue of research. He is also happy that he is unlike his ancestor Nicholas Shirecliffe, whose body was too large to fit through any second floor window or door of Whitely Hall after his sixteenth century death.

He is the author of five computer science books and a newly published book with the title "Computers and Logic in Genealogy." Two more are in progress. Dr. Leach has offered technical training and seminars on three continents and is the author or co-author of more than seventy-five technical papers.

Dr. I.M. Laversuch is a sociolinguist with a B.A. in German Linguistics and Literature, a B.S. in Clinical and Social Psychology, a M.A. in German Linguistics, and a Ph.D. in English Linguistics. Her areas of specialization include language policy, multilingualism, language acquisition, and onomastics. A member of the editorial boards for the Bilingual Family Newsletter (Multilingual Matters) and the Swiss literary journal, Variations, her articles have appeared in numerous international journals (e.g. Language Policy and Language). Her most recently published book, Census and Consensus (Peter Lang), examines the US Census and the official language policies regarding racial ethnonyms. She has worked extensively in the U.S.A., Switzerland, and Germany and is currently an English lecturer at the University of Cologne. She can be reached at the following address: Cottbuser Str. 11, 56075 Koblenz, Deutschland- GERMANY.