

Contributors to Volume 55, Number 1

Frank Exner, Little Bear, is a Squamish Indian originally from British Columbia, Canada. He lives in Durham, North Carolina and teaches in the School of Library and Information Sciences (SLIS) of the North Carolina Central University (NCCU). He has a Master of Information Science degree and Master of Library Science degree from NCCU SLIS. His doctorate (DPhil [Information Science]) is from South Africa's University of Pretoria. The source of this article was his thesis, The impact of naming practices among North American Indians on name authority control.

His research interests include personal naming among stateless nations, knowledge organization, and indigenous knowledge; he has published in The Journal of Information Science & Technology and Associates: the Electronic Library Support Staff Journal; and he has presented at annual meetings of the American Society of Information Science & Technology.

He can be reached at <fexner@yahoo.com or 1227 Seaton Rd. T-63. Durham, NC 27713.

Professor of English at University of North Carolina, Greensboro, Christian Moraru specializes in critical theory and 20th-century American literature, with particular emphasis on narrative and narrative theory, postmodernism in comparative perspective and the relations between globalism and culture. He teaches regularly undergraduate surveys and graduate courses such as English 740: Studies in Contemporary and Postmodern American Literature; English 650: Modern Literary Theory; English 549: The Critical Canon and Contemporary Issues; English 534: The Modern American Novel. His latest books are Rewriting: Postmodern Narrative and Cultural Critique in the Age of Cloning (2001), which came out in SUNY Press's Postmodern Culture Series, and Memorious

Discourse: Reprise and Representation in Postmodernism (Fairleigh Dickinson University Press, 2005). A chapter of his book on 20th-century mimetic ideologies, Poetics of Reflection: An Archeology of Mimesis, has been reprinted in the SUNY Press anthology, The Play of the Self (1994). The Comparatist, Canadian Review of Comparative Literature, Studies in the Novel, Modern Fiction Series, and The Journal of Narrative Technique have published his essays. He is currently at work on a book on the new discourses of cosmopolitanism. Dept. of English UNC Greensboro, 3143 HHRA, Greensboro, NC 27402-6170. c_moraru@uncg.edu.

Amy Leal teaches English at Syracuse University (401 Hall of Languages, Syracuse, NY 13244). She is interested in nineteenth century literary names and writes on such subjects as John Keats, Lewis Carroll, and material culture for The Chronicle of Higher Education Review.

Ernest L. Abel is Professor of Obstetrics/Gynecology and Professor of Psychology, and Distinguished Faculty, at Wayne State University. He has published widely on the subjects of fetal alcohol syndrome, drugs and behavior, and the Civil War. He can be reached at eabel@wayne.edu.