Christine De Vinne is Professor of English and Dean of the School of Arts and Sciences at Ursuline College, her alma mater and now the only women's college in Ohio. She received her M.A. from the University of Notre Dame and her Ph.D. from The Ohio State University, both in English. Her research and publications focus on autobiography and biography, especially confession; literary theory; and names studies. She serves as book review editor of Names.

Beth DiNatale Johnson holds degrees from Lake Erie College (A.B.), The University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana (M.A.), and Case Western Reserve University (Ph.D. in Social Policy History). She is an assistant professor at Ursuline College in Pepper Pike, Ohio, where she directs and teaches in the Ursuline Studies Program. Her research interests include aging and long term care and women and the Western Reserve region. Her articles have appeared in Encyclopedia of American Social Movements, Assisted Living: Current Issues in Facility Management and Resident Care, and Jewish Women: A Comprehensive Historical Encyclopedia.

David R. Johnson, Ph.D., is Professor of Sociology, Human Development and Family Studies, and Demography in the Department of Sociology at The Pennsylvania State University. His research interests include marital change over the life course, social factors in infertility, methods for the quantitative analysis of change, and community and rural-urban effects on mental health and child neglect.

Eileen Quinlan, SND, Ph.D., is Associate Professor of English at Notre Dame College, Cleveland, Ohio, where she teaches courses in writing and literature, specializing in twentieth-century and contemporary American literature. Currently she is working on a study of Louise Erdrich's fiction as narrative theological reflection on justice, rights, and responsibilities.

Dorothy Dodge Robbins is Assistant Professor of English at Louisiana Tech University. She received her B.A. from Oklahoma City University, her M.A. from The University of South Dakota, and her Ph.D. from The University of Nebraska-Lincoln, all in English. Her research interests include gender and modernism and names studies in contemporary fiction. She is co-editor of three anthologies, including Christmas Stories from Georgia (UP Mississippi 2005). Her articles and reviews have appeared in Critique, The Centennial Review, and The Southern Quarterly, among others.

Laurie K. Scheuble, Ph.D., is Senior Lecturer in the Department of Sociology at The Pennsylvania State University. Her current research includes trends and patterns in women's marital naming, social factors in infertility, and ethical issues in assisted reproductive techniques.

Lynn Westney is an associate professor at the University of Illinois at Chicago where she has served as a reference librarian since 1983. From 1991 to 2006 she edited the award-winning Educational Rankings Annual. A former vice-president of the American Name Society (2002-2004) and current member of the Canadian Society for the Study of Names, her onomastic research concentrates on food and fossil names. Westney serves on the editorial boards of JAHIC: Journal of the Association for History and Computing and OCLC Systems and Services: International Digital Library Perspectives. She has published extensively in the areas of academic rankings research, the promotion and tenure process, and the scholarship of engagement.
